

“When you’re looking for band members, you aren’t necessarily looking for the best players; you’re looking for the RIGHT players. Of course you want them to be good musicians, but the right chemistry is so very important.”

Actually I am...

I have an idea!

I am thinking of starting a band to do a whole bunch of Maverick tunes along with Tex-Mex and perhaps some Zydeco... I know how well this goes over with most crowds and it will be great in our area.

I even have a name thought out... Los Disidentes... You know how to get hold of me.

Lakeside Little Theatre's Legacy Project

An interview with Roger Larson

Lakeside Little Theatre's Legacy Project is our opportunity to share stories from some of our very talented members, directors and performers and to show our gratitude that they have chosen Lakeside Little Theatre as an outlet for their skills here in Mexico. We introduced our first video in this series in December, when Barbara Clippinger provided us with an entertaining snapshot of her life. This new video is the third episode of our ongoing project highlighting some of our legacy talent. Peggy Lord Chilton was the second interviewee earlier this year and we are very pleased to continue the project featuring Roger Larson.

Roger has appeared in seven plays at LLT. His professional career as an actor included roles in plays like One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, The Fantasticks and Night of the Iguana, to name a few. Roger also appeared in film.

Once again Patrick O'Heffernan, an accomplished radio interviewer, is doing the honors for this project, providing an engaging environment and interesting questions for Roger. The film was edited and technically enhanced by Jim Jack, commonly known as JJ in the theatre, making this all a very personal glimpse into Roger's stories. Donna Burroughs, who is on the LLT Board as our Playhouse Manager, was the stage manager and the person making sure that everything worked behind the scenes on the big day. Garry Peerless, who is also a board member, ensured that the apron of the stage was appropriately lit.
